

NEUROBEHAVIORAL DISORDERS

Children with neurobehavioral disorders have an imbalance in the brain.

If one hemisphere is processing information too slowly, a child can face several challenges—this is called a functional disconnect.

By increasing the processing capabilities through targeted sensory, motor, and cognitive stimulation, a functional disconnect can be corrected.

